MALIHINI TREE MUCH APPRECIATED

CHILDREN PRESENT
ENJOY GREAT TREAT

Local People Who Helped Carry Out Scheme Receive Much Praise—AUTOMAN LEWIS GIVES TOTS LONG RIDE.

It would require the pen of a Roosevelt and the brush of a Sargent to portray faithfully Christmas in Honolulu as it was celebrated on Saturday last. Never in the annals of the metropolis of Hawaii has such an auspicious event been celebrated in so lavish and so beautiful a manner. The carnival of confetti of the previous evening seemed to have put everybody in good humor. People were already astir when the sun glanced over Koko Head. All bore presents to dear ones; all seemed to be anxious to make Christmas a merry and a happy day. With such a good start it could not have been otherwise. It was Malihini Day. The Christ Child, whose birthday was celebrated, was in one sense of the word a Malihini on several occasions, and it was indeed fitting that thousands of Honolulu's best citizens should be on their way to Bishop Park to gladden the hearts of orphans and the children of our very poor who have accepted Christianity and who were present to be entertained by Christian people.

Originators of Plan.
For weeks past the good people of this fair city had been preparing for this great day. That they have been doubly rewarded for all the time and energy expended in this good cause goes without saying. One had only to gaze upon the faces of the hundreds of little children assembled, to note the heavily laden tables literally overflowing with toys, candy and all manner of good things so dear to the hearts of young people, to feel proud of Honolulu and her people. What did it all mean? Simply this: Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Bryan and daughter of Rochester, N. Y., the Misses Murphy of Helena, Mont.; Mr. and Mrs. Jackson of South Dakota and their cousin, A. Cassidy, were visitors in Honolulu in the winter of 1908. They felt homesick. Surrounded by a wealth of tropical foliage, rugged mountains and sparkling waters from off whose bosom gentle zephyrs blew, this did not seem like Christmas to them, when compared to the sleet and snow of their own homeland. Their hearts ached for a Christmas tree and for Christmas cheer, so they originated what is now known as "Malihini Day." They planned a treat for 500 children of Honolulu's poor, but actually some 1,200 little boys and girls were provided for. This spirit of generosity became so infectious that the people of Honolulu have now made it a popular event, so that each succeeding Christmas Day will also be a Malihini Day.

The Tables.
On the lawn in the center of Bishop Park, stood an immense Christmas tree decorated with gold and silver tinsel and imitation snow. In front of this were five long tables, each presided over by a bevy of Honolulu society dames.

On the first were 1,400 large bags of assorted candy in charge of Mrs. Elizabeth Church, who was ably assisted by Miss Thelma Murphy and Miss Martha McCheaney. At the second were 700 dolls of every size, shape and complexion, many fully dressed, others waiting for their foster mothers to make them some clothes. This table was under the supervision of Mrs. E. Murphy, her assistant helpers being Miss R. Davidson and Miss S. McLean. Next to this was a table laden with masks and horns, presided over by Mrs. C. N. Arnold and Mrs.

S. Angus. This was the fun-making table. It was indeed a sight to see these two kind-hearted ladies surrounded by scores of children and converting pretty little Chinese girls into fearsome looking monsters; cute little Hawaiian children into clowns, and winsome tots of all nationalities into bearded old men.

The boys were not forgotten, as C. C. L'Honniedieu had pocket knives by the gross on his table, and the faces of these little fellows were wreathed in smiles of joy when their outstretched hands clasped a treasure that every boy loves. Handkerchiefs by the hundreds, many with fancy borders, were on the fourth table. These were for the girls. It required the greatest dexterity on the part of Mrs. G. W. R. King, Mrs. James Guild and Mrs. M. H. Webb to keep the long line of girls moving. At the last table were miscellaneous toys, such as spades and buckets, kites, clock-work toys and even aeroplanes. These were in charge of J. K. Clark and U. F. Lemon. In addition to all these, an extra table had to be requisitioned for the oranges with which each little child was supplied. These were in the hands of Mrs. C. S. McLaren, Mrs. Walter Hoffmann, S. Benson and Dr. Monarrat.

Helping all these good people were a number of gentlemen, who spared no efforts to make things run smoothly. Their names are as follows: C. W. R. King, R. O. Mathe-son, C. R. Crane, E. Dekum, L. S. Connors, C. D. Rice, O. F. Helme and Alexander May. With coats off and shirt sleeves rolled up, they proved of inestimable value in keeping the tables replenished and forming the children into line.

Many distinguished visitors were noticed among the crowd of onlookers. Mrs. S. B. Dole, Major Maginnis, the grand old man of Mantana, was there with a large party of sympathizers; ex-Treasurer of State Col. Rice, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Germalne of Vancouver, B. C.; J. H. Hilt of San Francisco, who had his automobile packed with pretty little girls from the Hotel Plesasant; Mr. and Mrs. E. Hobson of Vancouver, B. C.; Mrs. and Miss Sloane of Oakland, Cal., and a host of other strangers, who one and all said that never in all their varied travels had they seen anything to equal the Malihini Christmas tree.

Mrs. Church Honored.
Words are indeed wanting to express adequately the thanks due to Mrs. Elizabeth Church, who, in addition to having charge of everything, made everyone feel a certain responsibility in making Malihini Day the success it was. Mrs. Church was everywhere and did the work of two strong men in keeping things going and brightening up the faces of those little children who were afraid of the crowd, the noise and Santa Claus. She has been honored by knowing that Honolulu feels proud of her. Ed Lewis was also singled out for praise. In addition to bringing the boys from the Kalihl Home in trolleybuses and autos, he gave rides to hundreds of Malihini girls, who, in all probability, had never been in an auto before. Last year Mr. Lewis conveyed a host of people to the Kalihl Home and charged so much per head, the money he collected in fares he turned over to the trustees to help provide Christmas cheer to the little inmates. Lieut. Kamalopili and Private Kalwe of the Kamehameha Cadet Battalion each rendered signal service as gate custodians, allowing only those with bona fide tickets to pass through. Moving pictures were taken of the vast crowd, the children and helpers by Mr. Bonine, and these will be thrown upon the canvas at his theater during the coming week.

ROUGH WEATHER RETARDS SHIPPING

Small Craft Unable To Go Outside Harbor Limits

A rough sea has been kicked up outside the harbor of Honolulu this morning which to considerable extent has retarded the movements of shipping at this port.

The succession of strong South Easterly winds approaching to the intensity of a gale prevailing on Sunday afternoon and evening caused strong swells which dashed against the breakwater formed by the reef and rendered travel by any of the smaller launches or other craft extremely perilous.

The Toyo Kisen Kaisha liner American Maru arrived off the port early this morning after about fifty days steaming from various South American ports of call. This vessel brings a shipment of fifteen hundred tons of fertilizer consigned to H. Hackfeld and Company. At noon today the America Maru was still off the harbor limits, the Federal quarantine launch being unable to proceed outside because of the state of the weather.

The doctors' launch is a small craft. It was deemed impossible to take the little vessel outside the channel with the seas running in huge swells.

The quarantine authorities were reluctant to permit the America Maru to steam through the channel and take up an anchorage inside the harbor, owing to the fact that the liner has called at a number of South and Central American ports that are usually infected with contagious diseases. The Toyo Kisen Kaisha liner kept her screws moving throughout the morning, hovering at a safe and conservative distance from the reefs.

The Pacific Mail liner Mongolia was reported from Koko Head at 9:30 this morning. The big vessel had been plowing through choppy seas which materially cut down her speed in reaching the port.

After a consultation between the Federal quarantine authorities, the immigration and customs officials it was decided that inasmuch as it was too rough outside to board the liner while off the harbor, the Mongolia would be allowed to come inside and take her place at Hackfeld wharf, while the medical officers carried on their investigation and examination. The Mongolia, coming from San Francisco, and a reputed uninfected port, influenced the decision in this case. The Mongolia came alongside her wharf shortly after the noon hour and after the quarantine, immigration and customs officers had completed their work, the large delegation of Honolulu passengers was permitted to disembark.

storm, no very great damage seems to have been done locally. An immense amount of mud has been brought down from the nearby hills and filled the gutters and drains, but this is being rapidly cleared away by gangs of men who have been specially apportioned to this task. A few banana trees were blown down by the violence of the wind last night, on the road to Waikeiki, but, taking everything into consideration, the city looks remarkably clean and fresh after the storm.

THE MATSON Navigation liner Enterprise is reported to have sailed from Hilo for San Francisco on last Friday, taking a shipment of over four thousand sacks of sugar in addition to a general cargo of sundries. The vessel carried a number of passengers. Captain Youngren declares that he has received no intimation that the Enterprise would be taken off the San Francisco-Hilo route. Thomas Palmer, formerly assistant engineer is now chief of the engine room.

GOOD WORK OF COUNTERFEITERS

There are either counterfeiters at work in these islands, or else bad coin is being dumped here from the mainland or from Oriental ports. Last Tuesday C. Hustace, Jr., of the Bank of Hawaii, while counting over a pile of ten dollar pieces, discovered one that did not appear to have a familiar touch of realness about it. It felt light in comparison to the other coins he was handling. When rung it emitted a brassy tone. Being too busy at the time to pay very serious attention to it, he laid it away in a drawer until after the Christmas rush was over. This morning he sent it Wichman & Co., on Fort street, with a note asking that firm to subject it to a thorough test.

found to be a perfect copy of real ten dollar pieces. The milling was perfect, and the stamping so good that even with a magnifying glass nothing wrong could be detected. It was weighed, when cut in half and treated to an acid bath, eight ounces. There seemed nothing wrong with it except that it emitted a brassy ring when struck. There were eight carats of gold in its composition and of a good quality. The baser metal was found to contain more brass than the regulation coins actually called for, but otherwise it was the finest counterfeit ever seen here.

It is the intention of H. Hackfeld & Co. to dispatch the Pacific Mail liner Mongolia for the Orient at five o'clock this evening. The vessel is leaving about 500 tons of cargo brought down from San Francisco. A half dozen passengers are booked to depart for the Far East by the Mongolia.
